FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

I don't do Romance, enlighten me then Valentine!

Are you looking forward to the onslaught of red roses, teddy bears and chocolate boxes, or does that make you feel a little shade of Grey.

When Jackson's girlfriend hinted at what he had planned for Valentine's day, especially when this year it falls on a Saturday, he knew it couldn't be the same boring red roses, chocolates and dinner as last year.

"I thought I would do something totally different, like the main character in 50 Shades of Gray. The lead character in the movie, Christian says "I don't do Romance." "Well that's me too!" says Jackson.

"In 50 Shades of Gray, Christian whisks Anastasia away into the sky for the experience of a lifetime. So I thought I would see what's involved to organising our very own charter flight," says Jackson. "The romantic weekend away would be surprise enough, but if it could contain a little adventure getting there, then it would be even better and even more memorable."

It turns out that organising a flight in a small plane with your very own personal pilot isn't all that difficult to do, and it certainly doesn't have to be expensive. There is a great website that lets travelers compare prices and availability for small planes and helicopters. Most of all, it gives you a response directly from the pilots and the aviation charter businesses. "It stops all the running around and you get to compare the best prices for your budget," says Jackson.

Joseph Pilo from Sydney Flight Charters says "How sweet would it be flying away for a sneaky weekend this Valentine's Day. There are more than 1800 airports across Australia and using a small plane or helicopter to access them is easier than you might think."

"Working out the details with your very own personal pilot is a lot of fun and surprising the Mrs was even more fun again," remarks Jackson with a cheeky grin.

Jackson just may have scored himself a whole NRL seasons worth of boyfriend brownie points. The romantic weekend away coupled with some adventure to get there sure beats the standard red roses, teddy bears and chocolate boxes hands down for this Valentine's Day.

If you're planning a sneaky romantic weekend away complete the surprise by packing her bags for her. The extra thought and attention to detail will increase the surprise factor ten fold! To download your free "What to Pack for Her" checklists go to:
